Present:

Mining for Talent to Leverage Your Organization
8:00 a.m. – 11:00 a.m.

Effective leaders are perpetually mining for all types of talent needed to carry out the work in education. Talent, passion, knowledge and skill are all key ingredients to any successful organization. But, sometimes, we also fail to mine for attitudes and dispositions about any project, task, or responsibility that a staff member takes on, including hiring new staff. Naturally leveraging these talents requires a leader who is willing to not only be a learner but also be willing to cross any barrier necessary to do what is best for students.

Escaping the School Leader's Dunk Tank
1:00 p.m. – 4:00 p.m.

In this session you will hear the raw and real stories from Rick & Rebecca as Dunk Tank Survivors. They focus on the current reality of politics in education and the human factors that influence why people do what they do. They will provide REAL circumstances that will sound stranger than fiction. In the latter part of the presentation they shift gears and focus on what we CAN do to tackle adversarial situations that exist on all levels in education and prevail as happy and healthy staff members at any level, not just within school leadership. The conversation will also include emotional intelligence, effective leadership practices, and restorative resilience.

District, school, and teacher leaders, along with other education leaders are invited to register for this event. You may attend one or both sessions.

Cash bar social/networking hour following the second session.

Please complete the registration form on the following page. Deadline is close of business 11-27-2017.
